

RecTrac is Family & Morale, Welfare and Recreation's automated customer usage system. This integrated software system provides accurate reporting data by tracking the use of FMWR recreational facilities. Mandated by the Army FMWR Board of Directors, this management information system helps us provide better recreation service to our customers by monitoring program and facility usage. More importantly, evaluating RecTrac data will eventually aid in determining future funding to support FMWR programs.

In order to use the U.S. Army Garrison - Detroit Arsenal FMWR Fitness Center, military members and civilians are asked to complete a simple, one-time registration process. This process takes less than five minutes to complete, and there is no fee involved. Once registered in the RecTrac system, customers will need to scan (swipe) their government ID cards (or sign in if the card scanner is unavailable) each time they use the Fitness Center. RecTrac scanners read the bar codes located on the back of eligible customer's ID cards.
